April, 1809. windings, one winding surrounding the whole of each mainpolar projection, and the other winding surrounding one-half or a part of each of two adjacent main polar projections, combined with means whereby the latter winding is joined in series with the armature winding when the motor is started and replaced by the first mentioned winding when synchronism is attained. A general idea of the British T. II. Patent referred to, may be obtained by an inspection of Figure 72. This patent has to do with improvements in self-starting devices, by the introduction of certain combinations of inductance and condensance, or of resistance and reactance in parallel with the motor across the mains. Alexander Heyland⁶ has devised a form of single-phase selfstarting motor. In this machine the chief winding is distributed in a set of slots, the leakage self-induction being reduced by having separate teeth over a considerable part of the periphery. The starting winding consists of closed coils wound in a bunched fashion so as to increase the leakage self-induction. A thin section of iron also bridges the slots holding these conductors. The currents induced in this closed winding, lag greatly and produce a cross field similar to another phase winding. His more recent work⁷ on the polyphase...
