Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from History of the Ninety-Seventh Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry Comrades of the 97th Regiment, Indiana Infantry Volunteers: Twenty-five years have rolled away, with their sunshine and shadow, since we were mustered out of service. Our first reunion was held at Worthington, Indiana, in September, 1888, and our second at Spencer, Indiana. At our first reunion it was determined that a history of the regiment should be written, which duty was courteously assigned to me. I then felt, and still feel, that the history will fall short of your expectations. But, feeling it to be the duty of a soldier to obey orders, at your command I have written this history. It must, in the nature of things, be incomplete. The time has been long since we, as boys, marched to the tunes of The Girl I Left Behind Me and The Greene County Hang On, and memory, ever treacherous, has let slip many things I would love to remember. But, if I cannot repaint the picture of your battles, and your marches and struggles for the supremacy of the dear old flag of the Union, and all the details of three years, covered over, as it is, with the dust of a quarter of a century, I will endeavor to bring out some of its most prominent features, which will at least give you an outline upon which someone in the future will improve. The companies that composed the 97th Regiment of Indiana Volunteers were enlisted in the 7th Congressional District during the months of July and August, 1862. The whole country, at that time, seemed to be turned into a military camp. Every day,...
